

A BIBLIOGRAPHY ON SOUTH AUSTRALIAN AGRICULTURE AND ITS HISTORY

MAIN HEADINGS

A Note – Bibliography – Theses – History (including Biography) – Viticulture – Further on Soil Conservation – Conference Papers – Other Government Publications – Periodicals and Reports – Archives – Illustrations and maps – Additional Notes

A NOTE

1. Although this listing is mainly of published material, Heritage Branch regional survey reports and conservation studies would be highly useful material for historical research, as would property maps and plans of various periods held in the State Library.
2. SA Parliamentary Debates and Papers were not searched for specific information but are a basis for any research. For example, reports of the Minister of Agriculture (and his/her successors), including Roseworthy Agricultural College annual reports, and the Parliamentary Committee on Land Settlement reports (produced annually from 1946).
3. Legislation – for example the Waste Lands Act 1857 that set out the conditions for sale of Crown Land, and the Crown Lands Consolidation Act 1877 (concerning miscellaneous leases for grazing and cultivation), and the Crown Lands Development Act 1943 and the War Service Land Settlement Agreement Act 1945 under which War Service Perpetual leases were allocated.
4. The History Trust of SA annual conference papers, as well as a range of South Australian Historical Society publications (e.g., its journal), The Torrens Valley Historical Journal and ANZAAS conference papers might also fruitfully be searched.
5. Publications, papers or annual reports of other bodies (e.g., the Australian Oil Seeds Federation, the Faculty of Agricultural and Natural Resource Sciences [Adelaide University] and the Plant Industry Division, Agronomy Branch, SA Department of Agriculture) could be researched.
6. Parliamentary Commissions of Inquiry and evidence
Zalums, E. (comp.), Bibliography of South Australian Royal Commissions, Select Committees of Parliament and Boards of Inquiry, 1857–1970 is an excellent finding aid.

Hagger, J. (comp.), Consolidated Index to the Checklists of Royal Commissions Select Committees of Parliament and Boards of Inquiry held in the Commonwealth of Australia, Queensland, New South Wales, South Australia, Tasmania and Victoria 1856–1960, La Trobe University Library Publication No. 19, Bundoora, La Trobe University Library, 1980 lists 22 entries under 'Agriculture, South Australia'. Other possible headings include Department of Agriculture.

A focused exploration of parliamentary papers and inquiries should be made. For example, the customs and excise tariffs minutes of evidence in SAPP58:1871 (the Royal Commission on Manufactures of Metals. Agricultural Machinery and Implements) are highly relevant. P. Donovan (In the Interest of the Country) noted the Report of the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on the Pastoral Land Management and Conservation Bill, 1989 (p. 222) and the 1981 report on 'The administration, management and tenure of South Australia's pastoral lands: a report to the interdepartmental working group appointed to inquire into the Pastoral Act and the Dog Fence Act', (p. 225).

THESES

Below is a sampling of certain topics that come under the more general subject of South Australian agriculture (including agricultural education). Theses completed in History and Geography at Flinders University were not considered in detail: for example, some Honours are listed below but MA and PhD theses such as Ellis, Julie-Ann, 'Public land and the public mind: origins of public land policy in South Australia, 1834–1929' (Flinders University of SA, 1995) are relevant. There may also be material held by the University of South Australia (especially for its predecessor, the SA College of Advanced Education) and by interstate universities.

In 2003 the Department of History at the University of Adelaide offered a BA Honours topic on 'A history of the Australian Farm Management Society (AFMS) and its contribution to farm management in Australia'. (The AFMS, active from the early 1970s, developed from the Farm Management Section of the Australian Institute of Agricultural Science, and wound up in 1997: see <<http://www.roseworthy.adelaide.edu.au/~icooper/fmscsa/index.htm>>. Several key members of the AFMS were South Australian).

Guides to Records

Finding aids to archival collections of Australian scientists and scientific organisations as published by the Australian Science and Technology Heritage Centre, University of Melbourne (Austehc) and the Australian Science Archives Project are available.

Austehc, formed on 3 May 1999, continues the academic, research and heritage activities of the Australian Science Archives Project (ASAP) which was established by Professor R.W. Home in 1985. ASAP was a self-funded autonomous project of the Department of History and Philosophy of Science, Faculty of Arts, at the University of Melbourne. The Centre will encompass ASAP's original objectives and continue to develop new programs that foster the preservation, promotion and development of the heritage of Australian science, technology and medicine.

Since March 1993 the History of Australian Science Newsletter is published electronically biannually.

OH 1/7 Interview with William Frederick Cook

William Cook was born in North London in 1911. In 1927 Bill's father, a goldsmith, brought the family to South Australia in search of better work opportunities. None eventuated for him and he returned home within a year. His wife and youngest son soon followed. Bill Cook, however, embarked upon an eventful three-year initiation of bush life in Australia – from very brief stints on a Mallee farm and Kidman's Myrtle Springs Station to life on the track in New South Wales en route to the working man's Mecca, Queensland (never reached), and work in the Mount Burr forest. Bill Cook settled in South Australia, never returned to England and never saw his parents again.

OH 1/24 Interview with Heinrich Alfred Klingberg

Heinrich Alfred Klingberg (1898–), one of 11 children, was born to German parents on a wheat farm at Arden Vale, north of Quorn. The Arden Vale School closed in 1910 and after a further nine months at a German school in Emu Downs for his Confirmation studies, Alfred began work. He spent four and a half years on his brother-in-law's farm at Wyacca before returning home when two older brothers went to war. However, by 1921 it was evident that the farm could not support the three remaining sons and his father settled him on a 30-acre block in Quorn. Alfred became a labourer in the Loco Sheds at the Railway Yards and he married a local girl. Their two children were born in 1923 and 1925. When the Commonwealth Railways took over the Great Northern Line in 1926, Klingberg was placed at the Mile End Loco Yard (he had requested Peterborough) where he specialised as an engine greaser.

Summary

Geoffrey Dix was the fifth of six children of an Ethelton fettler. His mother was the effective head of the household, supplementing the family's income by teaching piano and encouraging the three youngest children's musical development. During Geoffrey's childhood they performed as the Dix Family Band. Geoffrey left school aged thirteen and a half to become an office boy at Howard Smith Ltd. A year and a half later his skull was smashed by a horse shoe thrown up by a passing car. His speech was affected and he did not feel confident enough to return to office work. Instead he took on a succession of labouring and delivery jobs. During the Depression Geoffrey walked to Sydney seeking work and in the thirties he built up his own bread rounds. In 1938 he began a 30-year career with the T & G Insurance Co. Mr Dix married in 1932 and had two children.

Project: Oral History of the Australian Fishing Industry: South Australian Interviews

45 minutes recorded on 29 January 1990 by interviewer Jack Darcey. Full transcript available (20 pages). Copies may be made for research and study. Publication only with written permission from the Mortlock Library

Summary

The following is taken from the introduction to the interview provided by the interviewer: After a distinguished undergraduate and post-graduate university education and having gained experience in other scientific research endeavours, Mick Olsen joined the Fisheries Division of the CSIRO, Cronulla, New South Wales and was then transferred to Tasmania where he began making contacts with fisherman in South Australia, Victoria and Tasmania and gaining and understanding of fisheries management in those states. He became Director of Fisheries in South Australia in 1967 and introduced many of the fisheries management policies and techniques that still persist. His contribution to the health of the industry is widely acclaimed. Now retired and living in Adelaide, he retains his interest in the industry and particularly in the biology of species it harvests.

Interviewer: Tony Evans.

37 tapes (32 hours 30 minutes) recorded between August 1992 and March 1996.

Summary

Interviews with men who came to South Australia in their youths under the Boy Farm Apprenticeship Scheme (1922–24) and the Big Brother Movement (1927–28), both of which were promoted by the governments of the day to encourage British boys to emigrate as farm labourers. They became known as Barwell Boys and Little Brothers. The interviews are life stories, of which the interviewees' emigration and apprenticeship experiences are a part. The interviews were conducted by Tony Evans on a voluntary basis after he became interested in the subject through his acquaintance with the first interviewee.

- 74 Interview with Sam Jericho (1918–2000) [sound recording] Interviewer: Merle Piggott
 Summary
 OH 334/1 Sam Jericho's parents were pioneer farmers in Rudall, first taking up land in 1911. Sam worked on the family's six farms until 1945 when he took over an undeveloped section and began putting into practice the methods he believed would get the most out of the local soils and conditions. He describes in some detail the elements of his farm plan; including rotating stock through small paddocks, fencing sandhill vegetation with rabbit-proof netting, planting bands of trees along fence lines as wind breaks, and using minimum tillage methods of cultivation for crops. He recounts in detail how he went about establishing 2000 new trees each year between 1975 and 1988. He concludes by referring to his property's heritage agreement and explaining how he became the State winner of the inaugural Commonwealth Development Bank Ibis Awards for combining excellence in wildlife conservation and farming in 1989.

Summary

Photocopy of handwritten diary of Joe Willie Scholefield as welfare officer on the S.S. 'Balranald' which brought 50 'Barwell Boys' to South Australia in 1924, (13 March–23 April). The vessel left for Melbourne on 26 April, then arrived in Sydney on 1 May before returning to Melbourne on 23 May. The ship called in at Fremantle, Western Australia on 5 June and left for South Africa on 7 June, arriving at Durban on 22 June. The 'Balranald' left Durban on 24 June, arriving at Cape Town on 27 June and left the next day. On the way back to England the ship stopped in at Las Palmas on 13 July. The last day's [unfilled] entry in his diary suggests that the 'Balranald' arrived home on 19 July 1924. Includes newspaper cuttings, programmes of social events during the voyage, and a photograph of the 'Barwell Boys' taken in Adelaide on 23 April 1924 (next to page 82). A digital image of this photograph is available on the South Australian Database at D 7970/2(L).

History

Joe Willie Scholefield (1880–1956) was a member of the Huddersfield Methodist Church and Secretary of the Huddersfield YMCA. He was the welfare officer for the S.S. 'Balranald' trip to Australia, with 573 passengers on board, including 87 for Adelaide. These comprised about 50 'Barwell Boys' farm apprentices brought out from Great Britain under government assistance, and eight families. Some of the boys had earlier been training on farms in Scotland. The 'Balranald' also conveyed a collection of birds and animals for the Taronga Park Zoo in Sydney. Newspaper cuttings at pages 37, 42–43, 81–82 relate to passengers including the 'Barwell Boys'.

 Joseph Gilbert emigrated to South Australia from England aboard the Buckinghamshire in 1839. Bought 15 000 acres near Lyndoch and named the property Pewsey Vale. Stocked it with sheep, planted vineyards and built a large house with extensive grounds. Married Anna Browne (1812–1873) in 1848. Bought other properties for producing wool that included Cappeedee, Mount Bryan and Orriecowie. His son William Gilbert inherited these properties and sold several of them soon after his father's death. His son William Gilbert (1887–1967) sold Pewsey Vale soon after his father's death in 1923.

The Noel Butlin Archives Centre (NBAC) list of holdings as at December 1993 is described in 41 pp. The selections below of business and personal records and papers are taken from the on-line catalogue (<<http://anulib.anu.edu.au/nbac/collection.html>>). Their detail is not known. Descriptive series lists are only available at the NBAC. But they probably would have high relevance to a South Australian history depending on the direction and focus it takes and the degree of its connections to South Australian agricultural history. For example, wool shearer union members; national concerns of large pastoral and land auction companies, etc.

(General, and main, series holdings are in GRG 10; supplementary records and later transfers of material are in the separate GRS series, including material listed under GRS or awaiting transfer from the Department of Primary Industry and Resources South Australia)

The Department of Agriculture was established in 1902; it ceased to exist as a government agency under that name on 8 October 1992. No annual reports from the Department of Agriculture were published between 1972 and 1986. For the period 1975–79 the department was known as the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries. Information on, for example, the department's Experimental Research Stations is contained in State Records files.

Dairy Produce Board

GRG 10/18–23

The South Australian Dairy Produce Board, established by the Dairy Produce Act 1934, was concerned with butter and cheese for the local market. The Board was not connected to the South Australian Advisory Dairy Board (GRG 10/24–26), with the first appointments in March 1923 (for correspondence re its foundation see Minister of Agriculture files 53/1922 and 24/1923). In October 1933 its name changed to the South Australian Committee of the Australian Dairy Council; in January 1937 it became the South Australian Committee of the Australian Dairy Produce Board; in August 1938 a name change to the Australian Dairy Produce Board, Pasture Improvement Committee (SA). The Secretary was Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture and two other employees of the Department of Agriculture were on the Committee, which wound up in 1971.

War Service Land Settlement

The main settlement schemes in South Australia were in the Lower South East, Kangaroo Island, the higher rainfall areas of Eyre Peninsula, and on the land set aside for irrigation purposes in the Upper River Murray district. The Land Board (GRG 35/198) allotted allocations on a competitive basis. For example, GRG 35/561/pt 1/Box 4, 'Land Development Board Parndana East. Depot Buildings etc.' Information on contracts, cartage, plant and stores disposal; and Penneshaw East Sale. (Includes stock agents' auction catalogues).

GRG 35/193 'Classification Points' gives the point system judged on interviewing potential settlers, and the form that was filled on application.

GRG 35/198 Soldier Settlement Commission (Melbourne 1954).

- 'Letter Drafts' includes procedures on settlers' applications. For example, 'Procedure on allotment', lists the forms provided to the settler, i.e., Living allowance form, Tax concession form, Removal expense form, Acknowledgment form, Undertaking form, Detail of structural improvements, 12 application for Advance forms.
- 'Letters etc. relating to meetings of C/tees'. Additionally, the War Service Land Settlement Central Classification Committee (there were committees for Dry Lands and for Irrigation areas) required applicants to fill a form for initial application for classification for land settlement. This was to be signed before a JP; three written references covering the applicant's experience in primary production and/or regarding his character were to be provided; his personal appearance before a Classification Committee, at which he produced his discharge certificate, was also required. If men were still on war service they could apply to participate but no decision would be made before their discharge.

GRG 35/561, Box 1, Subject files – Kangaroo Island Office. Comprehensive information.

Land Development Executive

- Soldier Settlement records. These records contains folders that originally were probably used on Kangaroo Island for daily management of the scheme. Information includes boundary fence maps, town maps, and catalogues of the plant and equipment sales of 1962–63 etc.
- Several boxes in this series, including form letters for the South East district. One letter dated 28 June 1955 by the Director of Lands to W.A. Williams, Head Teacher, Parndana School, outlines the settlement scheme policy. (Williams requested the information to help with a course in farm book-keeping, which he intended teaching, presumably to soldier settlers.)

Sources of illustrations

Photographs/film/videos

It is likely that there will be far more illustrative material (photos, maps, films, videos, slides, glass plates) than can be incorporated in a single publication: existing publications etc show an extensive range of material. The option of doing a pictorial volume in addition to a volume of history could be considered: a 'coffee table' history of agriculture in SA could accompany the departmental history (either as part of a set or as a stand-alone volume).

State Library of SA pictorial collection (preliminary search only)

Search by 'agriculture' = 42 (including Broken Hill)

Search by 'farmhouses' = 209 (including interstate).

The Searcy Collection = 18 722 photos (some only are of agricultural subjects).

PRG 23/6 includes albums of miscellaneous photographs of farming and station properties, horse-drawn vehicles, townships, farm buildings and implements.

The former collection of the Agriculture Department's material is being sorted and arranged by Arthur Tideman and Trevor Roberts, including any material held in private hands that is suitable for incorporation in the collection.

The glass plate negative collection held by the History Trust of SA includes many interesting and rarely seen photographs of relevance to the history of agriculture.

National Library of Australia; La Trobe Picture Collection, State Library of Victoria; various government and private archives; RA&HS library etc. – not searched, but many are a rich archive of relevant photos.

McDougall, K., Winery Buildings in South Australia 1836 to 1936. Part 2: The Southern Districts, Working Paper 7, Architecture Papers, Faculty of Architecture and Town Planning, The University of Adelaide, May 1983. ISBN 0 86396 027 8. [Reproduces archival photographs and photographs taken at the time of the study, and outlines the background conditions and early histories of 26 wineries.]

Maps

A range of historical and contemporary maps will be an essential component of any published work. The State Library of South Australia, the Royal Geographical Society of South Australia, the Geography Department at the University of Adelaide, and PIRSA's library will be important for their collections of relevant maps (both broad-scale and for specific detail). Good quality mapping for publication can be prepared through PIRSA's Publications Services.

Some further options for research

Records of the Waite Agricultural Research Institute have not been identified for this bibliography. The work of Prof. James Prescott on viticulture and soils, for example, may be one instance for generating material. (His son, Professor John Prescott, formerly of the Physics Department at Adelaide University, might be a possible contact for an interview.)

Many records (1908–1943) of Dr J.J.C. Bradfield (1867–1943) of the Public Works Department of NSW, a strong advocate of a scheme to provide an Australian inland lake through river diversion, are in the National Library of Australia (NLA MS 4712). The level of South Australian content has not been researched for this bibliography.

Catalogues for the State Libraries of, New South Wales, Northern Territory, Queensland, Tasmania, Victoria and Western Australia were not researched in any great detail for either manuscript or printed material for this bibliography.

AGRICultural OnLine Access (AGRICOLA) is a bibliographic database of citations to the agricultural literature created by the National Agricultural Library and its co-operators. Production of these records in electronic form began in 1970. Citations and abstracts only are provided. The Journals Indexed in AGRICOLA database is updated quarterly. This will be a useful guide, at least for identifying immediate past and current trends.

Publications of the Council for Australian Science and Industrial Research Organization (CSIR to May 1949; thereafter CSIRO) have not been searched, but CSIRO publication lists are extensive. For example, CSIRO Research for Australia: Agriculture, CSIRO Research for Australia: 16, CSIRO, Canberra, 1987.

The worth of searching for publications of the Agriculture & Horticulture Training Council of South Australia is unknown.

The Society for Engineering in Agriculture, Australia (for example, History of Mittze Bros., South Australia, prepared by John Fielke, Roseworthy) might have valuable findings in its records.

RIRDC (Rural Industries Research and Development Corporation). Research Reports. Full text reports are available online through <<http://www.dpi.qld.gov.au/lerc>>, the Rural E-Reference Centre homepage. [Not accessed].
