| 1                | USA         | Assoc. Prof. Tanner presented work conducted by SARDI to develop a cost-effective method for seagrass rehabilitation at the biennial World Seagrass Conference and International Seagrass Biology Workshop in Annapolis (USA). This enabled the presentation and discussion of this work with a wide range of seagrass scientists and practitioners, and allowed Assoc. Prof. Tanner to hear about the latest work being done elsewhere. In particular, discussions have helped lead to insights about how to address problems currently being faced in SA with scaling up from highly successful small-scale restoration plots, to larger scales, which is currently proving problematic. | 7430                              |
| 1                | USA         | Prof Goldsworthy attended a whole day workshop ‘Assessment Approaches to Supporting Bycatch Management for Marine Mammals’ lead by the Ocean Modelling Forum. Key presentations from Andre Punt and Tessa Francis (University of Washington) and Kristy Long and Jeff Moore (NOAA Fisheries). Excellent modelling tools were shared, including those to assist in the design of observer programs, to estimate marine mammal bycatch from observer programs, and to estimate potential biological removal.   | 0                                 |
| 1                | France      | Dr Reza Barekatain attended the World’s Poultry Congress 2022 (WPC), the largest scientific event specific to poultry held every four years around the globe. Attendance at this conference provided an opportunity to showcase SARDI’s poultry research, scan emerging developments within poultry science, and forge new collaborative partnerships to advance the prosperity and sustainability of South Australia’s primary industries and regional communities.   | 0                                 |
